1963 BUHIAN

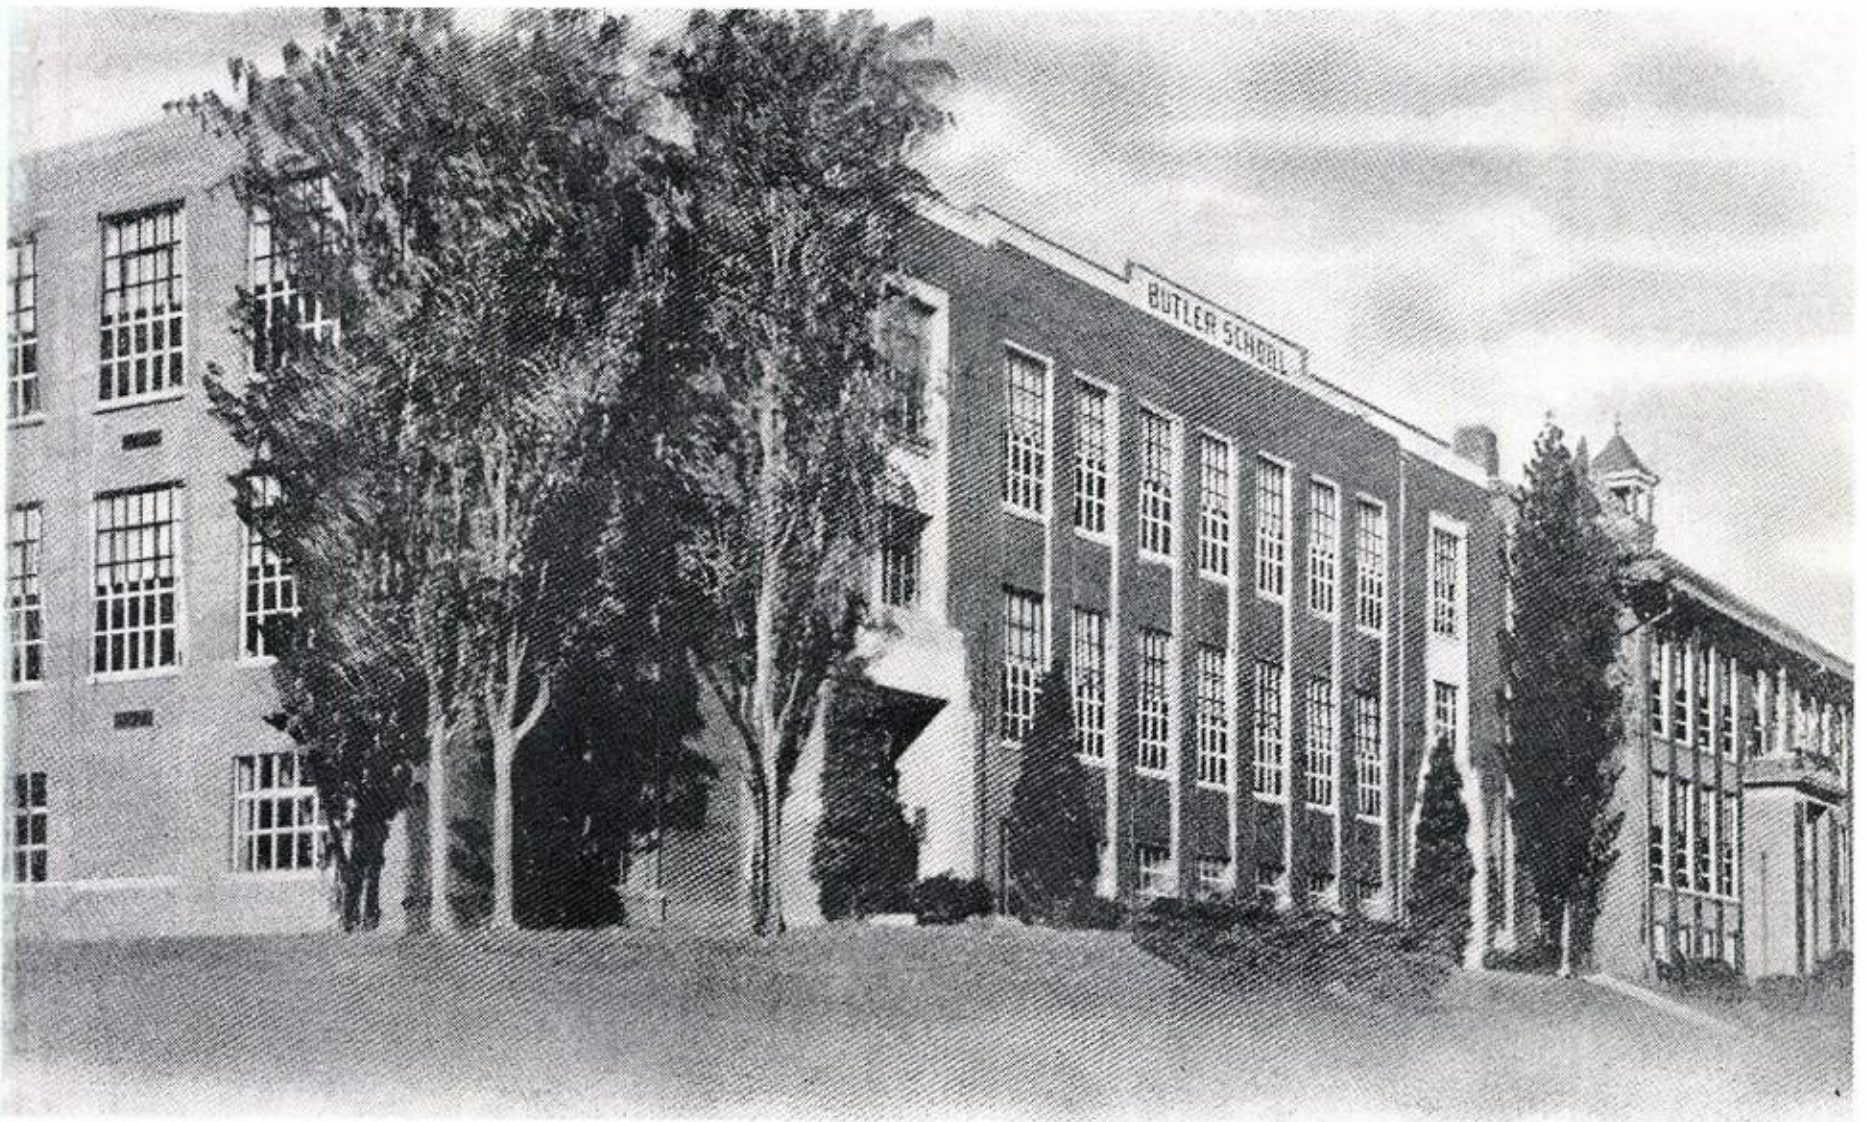

THE SENIOR CLASS OF 1963

PROUDLY PRESENTS THE LAST BUTLER HIGH ANNUAL

THE

"1963 Buhian"

'Tis May of the year 1963
And soon graduates we will be,
We'll open life's door and close our books
And with a sigh, give one last farewell look.

And that night when our diplomas are presented
We'll remember the things we loved and resented.
But as we go out to make a life of our own,

We'll look back and cherish when
BUTLER was our home.
And though we didn't always do as we should,
Most of the time we did the best we could.
And when these Butler halls we leave,
None will smile, all will grieve.

We'll remember the "orange and black,"
And how we used to act.
And the times that used to be,
As we look back on '63.,

the weavers...

In a free land such as ours, no man is really free. Every citizen is a slave to his own conscience. Every word spoken and every deed performed is the result of one man's conscience. These words and deeds form the woof and warp of the fabric that makes this nation and this locale what they are—or what they are not. The air can be pure, the soil rich, the forests green and the sea full of fish; but these can only be good if men and women put them together for good.

Weaving the fabric of a community becomes the grave responsibility of every free man. It is a responsibility that can't be delegated to anyone else. Communism only succeeds when free men fail in their individual responsibility.

We are free men. We live in an area of true wealth in terms of natural and financial resources, transportation, culture, recreation, and education. It is the responsibility of each one of us to assemble these assets to their greatest advantage and to our maximum benefit. May our conscience be our guide.

MUCH HAPPINESS AND SUCCESS
TO THE SENIORS OF THE 1963
CLASS OF BUTLER HIGH SCHOOL.

Dedication

MR. ROBERT CARROLL

To Mr. Carroll we dedicate the 1963 Buhian. During our years at Butler High School, you gave us encouragement in our school work, and you were always interested in the progress of each of us individually.

Your helpfulness, your understanding and liking for teenagers, and your excellence as a teacher gave us a good start in our climb toward a successful life.

Class Prophecy

The year is 1975 and after graduating from Ohio State we've come back to write a book about our old classmates, which we expect will be a best seller unless it is censored by the authorities.

The first classmate we see as we visit our old Alma Mater is Miss Marsha Thompson, who teaches English in Miss Hoffman's famous old room. As we walked into the room, Miss Thompson suddenly ran to the window and shouted, "There goes my mom!"

After a delightful visit with Marsha, we visited the Physical Education Department, which was in charge of Lois McKee. At that time, she and Jim Dement, who also teaches Physical Education, were in the process of teaching freshman boys judo.

While we were talking to Lois and Jim, Duane Steiner, the principal, came in. Noticing our surprised faces, he explained how he had taken over Mr. Tucker's former position and gave us the addresses of the rest of our classmates.

As we were going out the door, we passed Karilyn Worley, now Karilyn Reardon, who was coming to talk to Duane about Moose Junior's grades.

Driving down Millionaire Lane, we passed Marvin Divelbiss stepping into his helicopter, which was being piloted by Jack Roberts. His wife, the former Donna Polito, tenderly kissed him and watched the helicopter fly out of sight. Marvin is now the President of the United States Engineering Executives.

Further down the road we saw a sign reading "Jungle Wayne's Pet Shop." Thinking of Wayne Burson, we decided to stop and see if there was some connection. Carol Wilson, his assistant, greeted us at the door saying Wayne was not available because he was working in the snake pit. While we were talking to Carol, she asked us if we had visited Carol Pipes' and Evelyn Norris' new dress shop. She understood that they carry dresses created by Joyce Bratschie, which are designed exclusively for the society matrons, such as Sandra Heichel, whose husband is the wealthy Bernard Johnson. Bernard has been quite successful in his job as personal consultant to Miss Hoffman. At the present time his efforts are centered on designing a new desk for her, which is to be released to the public next year.

We decided to drive by the Ski Resort, which had been built after we graduated, and the first person we ran into was Ted Kuhn, who was still on crutches after a bad fall on the slopes. He said he really didn't mind because his nurse, Perky Ewing, was taking good care of him as she does all good-looking skiers. We were just about to leave, when, lo and behold, we saw the familiar figure of Rich Snyder rushing up to us. His wife, the former Becky Baith, had recently purchased the Ski Lodge for him.

We had so many things to reminisce about that Rich decided to take us to dinner at Herman's Hideaway. On the way, we stopped off at Phyllis Robinson's Floral Shop to get corsages especially designed by Kenny Swank. They were pinned on us by Bob Long, Phyllis' right-hand man.

Upon entering the night club, we saw Bill Brokaw, the bouncer, showing Gerald Meeks the door because he had been bothering the star performer. After dinner and the floor show, we discovered that the star whom Gerald had been familiar with was none other than the famous singer and dancer, Linda Peters.

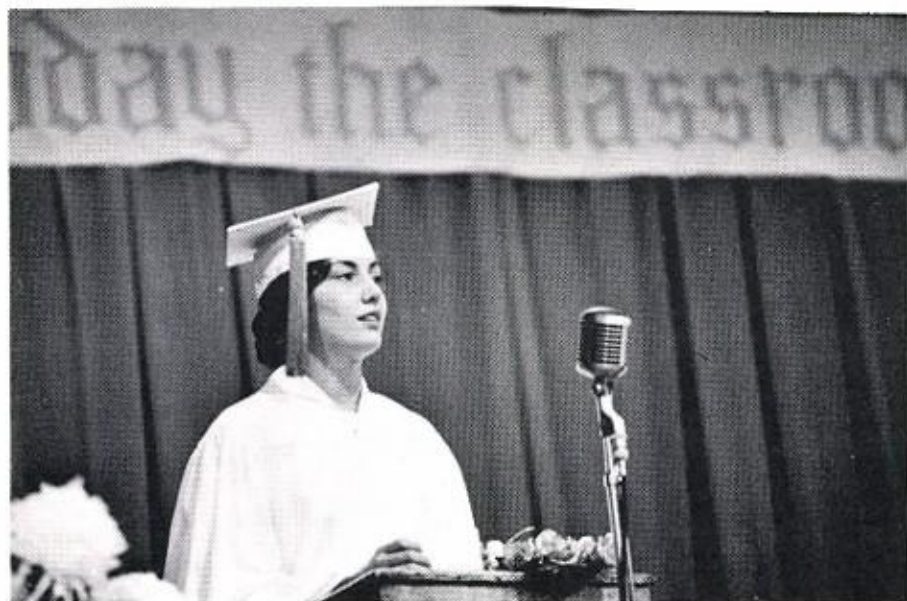

Now that we have the accurate information to complete our book, we have decided to return to our penthouse on Park Avenue in Manhattan to add the finishing touches and have it published so we can send it to you, our friends back home.

Football Homecoming

Queen Joyce Farst

SENIOR ATTENDANT
Barbara Ewing

JUNIOR ATTENDANT
Dorothy Reeder

October 19, 1962, was a very memorable evening for Homecoming Queen Joyce Farst and her court.

The ceremonies began as Joyce and her court were brought on the field by their escorts: Captain Kenny Swank, Dave Meeks, Gale Flockerzie, Dick Stewart, and Bruce Ramsey. After being crowned, Joyce presented Kenny with the game football. Joyce and her court were honored at the Homecoming Dance following the game.

The new year was a happy one for these five girls when they were chosen as queen and attendants to represent the 1963 basketball team at its annual homecoming game, January 25.

Between the reserve and varsity games, Joyce was crowned as the 1963 basketball homecoming queen by captain Gale Flockerzie. She in turn presented him with the basketball to be used in the varsity game.

After the game, queen Joyce and her court were honored at the homecoming dance which ended a very memorable evening for all of them.
